Charles Separt, and his jury on Monday morning are to resume the investigation of the deaths by asphyxiation of the three young men from Benson in the Wilson apartments three weeks ago. This announcement is made along with the action of the coroner in committing to Wake jail F. W. Goss, of Durham, who is regarded as an important witness in the case, and who had planned to leave this State for Buffalo, N. Y., to take a course of special training in running automobiles. He was unable to give $1,000 bond demanded of him by the coroner, on advice of Solicitor H. E. Norris, who is directing the investigation into the affair. Goss testified at the original hearing that he went to the Wilson chophouse on Monday, February 5, and asked for the three Benson men, saying that he knew them well. He was with them the evening before. He was allowed to go to the room they occupied and tried to get in, but failed. He says he looked through the keyhole and smelled no gas. Unless it is being kept secret by the officials there is no evidence of either of the three having the "myriad hundred dollars," either in Raleigh or on the trip, except that Miss Weeks insists that Johnson told her he had it. She does insist he had a revolver that has never been found. He drew this at Four Oaks when it was jokingly suggested that Miss Weeks's father might be waiting for them there to stop the marriage of Johnson and Miss Weeks. However, even the officers investigating the case do not take the story of the marriage that was to take place on Monday seriously.
